The Story

"Mad" Vic Dyson, whose bitter experiences with life have turned him against man and woman alike, is harassed by one Madden and his gang, tools of the local money king Keever. The latter is trying to get Dyson's ranch for a railroad right-of-way at a beggars price. To this end he has Madden and his men ride Dyson's cattle to the bone, cut off his water supply and other delicate attentions to force him to sell. Neva, an orphan, is stenographer in Keever's office and engaged to Stacey the bookkeeper. Dyson finds the two on his land and disgusted with Stacey's cowardice, kisses Neva, arousing her blazing anger. He bets his life against another kiss when they next meet. This happens soon after and he gives her his gun to use on him but she retreats and falls backward over the edge of a ravine. He is shocked and picking her up carries her to his cabin, sends his only remaining cowboy "Skip" for the Doctor, and is told by the latter who is his only friend in town, that her spine is injured for life.

Meantime a searching party find Dyson's gun where Neva was last seen and a lynching party headed by Madden comes to get "Vic" when the Sheriff arrives and Neva tells them it was an accident. Foiled they leave and Dyson to make amends sells his herd to Keever and deeds his ranch to Neva who meantime has fallen in love with him. Stacey to avoid marrying an invalid has vanished.

"Vic" sends the deed to Neva by "Skip" with a goodbye note and goes to keep a date to finish Keever for good at the Little River Bridge. An ambush arranged by Madden and two of his gang is spoiled by "Vic" who route them and then, meeting Keever on the Bridge, throws down his gun and beats him up, finally throwing him into the river just as Neva rides up. At her request he jumps in and pulls Keever ashore. Neva then tells him he has been blind to her love for him and that his troubles are over as the railroad, tiring of Keever's delay, has offered $50,000. for his ranch. Thus Fate holds for both a rosy future.
